Why Earth Trust needs you:

Our new educational building Earth Lab is complete and ready for visitors. Now we need your help in making the surrounding areas beautiful, functional and educational. Each area will tell a story and link to our archaeological finds or educational programme with a roman herb garden, Iron Age allotment, pumpkin patch, forest garden and wildflower meadow.

What's in it for you?

We need volunteers to help us to shape the new areas around Earth Lab to educate the children who visit whilst also supporting our native wildlife. You will get to share your expertise with us and other like-minded gardeners or learn from more experienced gardeners, sharing ideas and putting them in to practice. We will be using locally produced plants and materials where possible and gardening to a high environmental standard so as not to have a detrimental effect on the environment.
